Deucrictibant Ph 3 CHAPTER-3 HAE Prophylaxis Trial Meets Expectations

This morning, Pharvaris (PHVS; N/R) reported positive topline results from their ph 3 CHAPTER-3 trial evaluating QD oral deucrictibant as an HAE prophylaxis. The study met its primary endpoint with deucrictibant reducing monthly HAE attack rates by 83% vs. pbo (0.35 vs. 2.06 attacks/mth; p<0.0001), incl. an 87% reduction in the Type 1/2 subgroup. 96% of pts achieved a ≥70% attack reduction, while 66% achieved a ≥90% reduction, and 46% remained attack-free through 24wks. PHVS expects these results will support regulatory submissions expected to begin in 1H27.

Overall, these data are broadly confirmatory of deucrictibant's efficacy profile established in prior studies, and thus largely in-line with expectations. The results reinforce that deucrictibant could ultimately become a competitive oral prophylactic option, particularly for patients who value oral administration but remain incompletely controlled on Orladeyo. On the conf call, the HAE KOL similarly noted that patients doing very well on Orladeyo may have little reason to switch, while patients seeking greater efficacy could represent potential deucrictibant candidates.

We believe BCRX's navenibart remains well positioned as a complementary opportunity for BCRX through its potential Q3M/Q6M dosing profile, which could offer a distinct value proposition for patients prioritizing high efficacy with very infrequent administration.

Bottom Line: We view deucricitbant's CHAPTER-3 results as largely in line with expectations and not thesis-changing for BCRX. Mgmt had long expected PHVS to report ph 3 data that would be competitive with Orladeyo, and most investors had expected deucrictibant to have injectable-like efficacy levels and a better tolerability profile than Orladeyo.

Based on regulatory timelines discussed by PHVS, deucrictibant is unlikely to be on the market until 1H28, providing Orladeyo with a near 2yr runway as the sole oral HAE prophylaxis on the market. Deucrictibant has the potential to be the first HAE product to be approved for both on-demand use (PDUFA is 4/23/27) and for prophylaxis. Unclear at this point if a dual role for the bradykinin B2 receptor antagonist is an advantage or disadvantage in terms of efficacy/ tolerability.

Besides quarterly sales update, the next significant catalyst for BCRX will likely be the readout of the ph 3 ALPHA-ORBIT trial evaluating navenibart as a long-acting (Q3M-Q6M dosing) injectable HAE prophylactic in 3Q27. We believe navenibart remains well positioned to offer a distinct dosing convenience value proposition for HAE patients prioritizing prophylaxis with high efficacy and very infrequent administration.

CHAPTER-3 Delivers Efficacy In-Line with Expectations Across Endpoints. The ph 3 CHAPTER-3 trial randomized 85 pts 2:1 to deucrictibant XR 40 mg QD or pbo for 24wks. Deucrictibant reduced monthly HAE attack rate by 83% vs. pbo (0.35 vs. 2.06; p<0.0001), while the Type 1/2 subgroup demonstrated an 87% reduction. Attack reduction was evident within the first week and sustained through wk-24. Responder analyses were similarly strong, with 98.2%, 96.4%, and 65.5% of treated pts achieving ≥50%, ≥70%, and ≥90% attack reductions, respectively, while 45.5% remained attack-free vs. 3.3% on pbo.

QoL Improved Meaningfully; Manageable Safety Profile. Deucrictibant demonstrated a 32.2 pt improvement from baseline in AE-QoL at wk-24 vs. 8.7 pts for pbo, representing a 23.5 pt pbo-adj benefit (p<0.0001). TEAEs occurred in 76.4% of deucrictibant pts vs. 56.7% on pbo, with most Grade 1/2. Three Grade 3 and one Grade 4 events occurred on deucrictibant, with one SAE, one treatment discontinuation, and two Grade 2 liver-enzyme elevations, both with potential confounding factors.

Prophy NDA Planned for 1H27; On-Demand PDUFA in April 2027. Deucrictibant IR has a PDUFA of 4/23/27 for FDA approval as an on-demand treatment. PHVS is targeting 1H27 NDA filing (likely post approval for on-demand treatment) for a prophylaxis usage of deucrictibant XR, with the filing expected to incorporate reusults from CHAPTER-3 and addl safety follow-up from the ongoing CHAPTER-4 OLE. The ph 3 CREAATE Part 1 topline data (from AAE-C1INH pts) are expected in 1Q27 and could also be included in the filing depending on timing, though PHVS does not view CREAATE as gating the prophylaxis filing.

VALUATION (PRICE TARGET: 16.00)

Our Buy rating and 12-month price target of $16 are based on the average of two valuation methods: 1) a DCF analysis out to 2030, discounted at 10% with a 2% terminal growth rate; and 2) a multiples-based valuation method utilizing discounted (also 10%) 2030 earnings, EBITDA, and sales estimates. The average of the two methods arrive at a valuation of $16/share.

POTENTIAL UPSIDE DRIVERS

- Successful commercial uptake of Orladeyo for HAE prophylaxis in the U.S.
- Successful Orladeyo launches in Europe, Japan and other ex-U.S. territories.
- New clinical programs targeting rare diseases.
- In-licensing of commercial and/or late-stage development assets.

RISKS TO TARGET

BCRX

- Uncertain commercial uptake of Orladeyo based on GI tolerability issues and efficacy levels not superior to injectable HAE prophylactics.
- Increased competition in the HAE therapeutic space, with an oral HAE prophylactic product expected by 2028.
- Negative/unfavorable clinical trial readouts of pipeline candidates.
